Editorial

As a group of the B.C. members met last December with our CGGA president, John Andoff, the conversation somehow centered on the desirability of a journal. Maybe it was a mellow mood, maybe a spirit of gaiety, but before we were really aware of the implications a promise was made - the B.C. group would produce the first issue of a journal.

Realities emerged: no budget, no staff, no leisurely contemplation. Need one also add, no available time?

It must have been a spirit of adventure. Participation in the first conference at Geneva Park in 1963 triggered new ideas of counselor education; involvement at Niagara Falls in 1965 stimulated awareness of national communication. John Andoff inspired The Canadian Counselor.
